Toledo, O. April 22 1896.

My Dear Mr Dunbar:

I enclose a letter that I have just received which explains itself.

I shall try and accept Mr Jennings's invitation.

I came down to the city yesterday and could make for you as follows and each one of the gentlemen ^{said} reported that they wanted to see you and make your acquaintance. Mr King said he would give you a number of names of persons that would buy books, that he had already spoken to several and would speak to more.

Mr Scott, I think, is President of the Board of ~~Trustees~~ Trustees of the City Library. He speaks of putting your book in the Library.

Mr Childs, night clerk at the Boardy House, told me that he had received a long and beautiful letter from Mr. Hearn, to whom he presented a book when Mr Hearn was here.
 He will mail me the letter Friday as you can see it when you come out again. I met Mr Keavenush of the Blade and he told me your poem to Louise would be published either today or tomorrow. I also saw Mr Martin who is one of the proprietors of the Sunday Journal, and who is in the City engineers office in the Valentine Building, who is anxious to know you.
 He said if you would call on him, he would take pleasure in introducing you to a number of persons in the building who would probably take your book.

Don't you see your "stock in trade" is beginning boom, "Hold on to the willows" croak oratech, and pray and "you will get there with both feet" Hoping that you are in better spirits and that the cuticle has thickened just a little over the excruciating spots I am very truly yours —

Let me hear from you by phone

Very truly yours
