Cover: In 1818, Estwick Evans, a young attorney from New Hampshire seeking to "acquire the simplicity and virtues of savage life" while divesting himself of the "factitious habits, prejudices, and imperfections of civilization," began a 2,000 mile walking tour that carried him from New England to Detroit. His journey carried him directly through northwest Ohio's Great Black Swamp. See Scott Honeycutt's "Estwick Evans: Walking the Long and Solitary Way."
